The IKD is focused on maintaining the highest standards meeting its code of ethics and promoting harmonisation of regulations and licensing process, particularly within the European Union.

Objective:

With its objectives in mind, the relative rapidity of expansion of the EU, and with it the introduction of varying licensing laws and procedures, the IKD has moved to explore a tolerable level of standards to recommend as applicable to each EU member state for investigations in the private sector when considering : -

- a. Implementing regulation
- b. Reviewing existing regulation
- c. Cross border activity

Where regulation exists or contemplated, some, but not total, control is effective. The absence of harmonized regulation, in a liberal cross-border free-market, creates confusion, unfair competition and an attraction to bad practice for the opportunists.

The objective of the IKD research and this resulting document is to communicate the IKD approved level for investigations in the private sector as a common minimum standard within the EU.

Common Minimum Standard:

In practice, of course, the existing minimum standard is zero regulated control and zero self-regulated or unregulated discipline. Where no regulation exists there are National associations, each with respectable code of ethics and in many instances disciplinary procedures, but membership and thus self-regulation through such an organization is by its very nature voluntary and representative of only a fraction of an unknown number of practitioners in their respective jurisdictions.

In contrast, where regulation is implemented the standards vary immensely from minimal to the upper level applied in Spain.

It is the express desire of the IKD membership (which includes the majority of National associations in the EU) that each EU member state takes into consideration the minimum standard recommended in this document. That start-point standard is designed to be realistic, achievable and sympathetic to the standards already in existence, whilst aspiring towards higher levels.

A. Extent of the Research:

The research for existing regulations for investigations in the private sector included the following countries:

- | | | |
|------------------|---------------|------------------|
| ❖ Austria | ❖ Ireland | ❖ Portugal |
| ❖ Belgium | ❖ Italy | ❖ Sweden |
| ❖ Denmark | ❖ Latvia | ❖ Slovakia |
| ❖ Czech Republic | ❖ Lithuania | ❖ Slovenia |
| ❖ Germany | ❖ Luxembourg | ❖ Spain |
| ❖ France | ❖ Netherlands | ❖ United Kingdom |
| ❖ Greece | ❖ Norway | |
| ❖ Hungary | ❖ Poland | |

B. Sources:

The research has been carried out using information provided by / sources from:

National Chambers of Commerce
National Trade Commissions
EU Commission Information
National Authorities

Affiliated Unions
Professional Organisations
Private Investigators' Associations
Internet Research

C. Findings:

The research showed:

- no existing common standard for the named countries.

Where regulation exists, the research showed:

- no set legislation / regulation
- different procedures
- variations in criteria
- inconsistent criminality tolerance
- no pattern in exemptions or how they be applied

The research did, however, reveal that in attempting to establish a common minimum standard the Convention for Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and its Amendments have to be considered

D: Status quo

The current position is that Private Investigators are either:

- 1: licensed, or:
- 2: unlicensed

The impact of the current status is as described above, confusing, unfair and open to abuse to the detriment of the sector and the consumer.

- 3: but where licensed, there is no cross-border harmony or agreed minimum standard.

E. Proposal:

A common minimum standard is proposed to consist of:

- Option 1: Personal Requirements
- Option 2: Probity (Fit and Proper)
- Option 3: Competence
- Option 4: Professional Indemnity
- Option 5: Code of Ethics
- Option 6: Exemptions to options 1 to 5
- Option 7: Validity

Option 1, Personal requirements:

Age 18 and of sound mind

Option 2, Fit and Proper / Integrity:

A clear current criminal record

- clear of recent relevant offences, as categorised in Annex "A"

Option 3, Competence:

Education and Practice: a minimum of 80 ECTS (European Credit Transfer System) related credits in lectures, practical work, seminars, private work, examinations or other assessing activities, awarded only when the course has been completed and all required examinations have been successfully taken, covering:

- Law
 - ✓ Criminology
 - ✓ Civil
 - ✓ Privacy
- Methodology

The required test of competency to cover:

- The ability to determine the objectives of an investigation
- Planning an investigation
- Communication skills (liaison with client and subordinates)
- Execution of the plan, gather information and assessing its value to the objectives
- Reporting techniques and forward thinking (ability to provide recommendations)

Each of these areas should be underpinned by understandable knowledge of relevant legislation, regulation and codes of practice.

Assessment of all of these areas could be through case studies, either actual or scenario-based.

Option 4, Professional indemnity:

- Insurance at a set minimum
- recommended minimum is €30,000

Option 5, Code of ethics:

The IKD Code of Ethics with the included obligation to maintain secrecy of given and obtained information as listed in Annex "B"

Option 6: Exemptions to options 1 to 5:

Exemptions to any of the Options be applied by the National licensing authority

Option 7: Validity:

The options to the common minimum standard apply:

- ✓ only when and as long as all requirements are met
- ✓ applicable within the EU member-states
- ✓ to individuals and/or companies applying for a license after December 31st, 2007

F. Recommendation:

The IKD recommendation for a common minimum standard is to apply all 7 options.
